The Olio.

TO MRS. JUDSON.

AUGGESTED BY HER POEM "MY BIRD." And does thy bird, so loved, so fair, Still with its presence bless thy home Then thou indeed, most happy there, For earthly loys need'st never roam.

But ah ! a bird as fair as thine-And fairer, earth hath never known-I could once call, with fondaces, mine, But now alse! that bird bath flown

O long, full long, may'at thou fle spared. The anguish that my heart doth know, And with glad songs may thy sweet bird Cheer thee wherever thou shalt go

And as it learns, when thou art lone, To charm thee with its sweetest lays, Then thou cans't teach that infant voice To soar to heaven in grateful praise.

And O ! did not "old ocean roll," Between thy happy home and mine, I'd hasten to thy Indian cot, And share thy joys-yes, even thine

I'd woo that little bird to me, And fold it to my throbbing breast, And there in safety might it lie, Where late my own was all so blest

Say, when at night thy "birdling" fair, Doth fold its tiny wings to rest, Will thou not crave, in secret prayer, Blessings on this deserted nest f

WHERE SHALL I SPEND ETERNITY?

A lady had written on a card, and placed it on the top of a hour-glass in her garden-house, the following simple verse from the poems of J. Clare. It was when the flowers were in their highest glory.

That I am not to see ! To think a weed is yet to bloom From dust that I shall be !"

The next morning she found the following lines, in pencil, or the back of the same card. Well would it be if all would ponder the question-act in view of, and make preparations for an nknown state of existence.

"To think, when heaven and earth are fled, And times and seasons o'er-When all that can die shall be dead, That I must die no more ! O! where will then my portion be: Where shall I spend eternity ?"

A butterfly basked on a baby's grave, Where a lily had chanced to grow; Why art thou here with a gaudy dye, Where she of the bright and sparkling eye Must sleep, in the church-yard low ?

Then it lightly soured through the sunny sir, And spoke from its shiny track,-I was a worm till I won my wings, And she whom thou mourns't like a scraph sings; Wouldst thou call the blest one back?
